Objectives of the Ashley County Genealogical Society

1. To increase interest in and raise the standard of genealogical research and compilation by means of educational programs, workshops, and the publication of genealogical data.
2. To encourage and instruct members in the art and practice of genealogical research and compilation, as well as to acquaint members with sources of genealogical material in Ashley County and elsewhere.
3. To serve, through its periodicals and otherwise, as a medium of exchange of genealogical information.
4. To promote the collection, preservation, and utilization of manuscripts, documents, and other materials of genealogical value.
5. To aid local libraries in their maintenance and acquisition of genealogical materials.

Every effort is made by the Society for accuracy in materials printed in its quarterly, particularly in copying source materials. It is suggested that original materials always be checked when possible.

We encourage members to submit articles of interest for publication, and we urge you to submit family group

EARLY MOREHOUSE PARISH, LOUISIANA

Written by ACGS member Faith Nowlin

Few attempts were made by the French or Spanish government to establish settlements in the Ouachita area of Louisiana prior to 1782. After the Treaty of Paris in 1783, the United States expanded westward to the Mississippi River. Spain decided to populate the Ouachita region. Francois Bonaventure, an Indian trader at Point Pleasant on Bayou Bartholomew, was one of the first Europeans to receive a grant in what later became Morehouse Parish. The inhabitants of Morehouse prior to Bonaventure's arrival and the establishment of Poste d' Ouachita in 1783, were Caddo and Quapaw hunters. The Choctaw Indians came later as a result of western expansion of settlers in their homelands in Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi.

Joseph de Maison Rouge became interested in taking colonists to Spanish Louisiana and obtained a passport in 1785 to examine the land in the Ouachita region. Settlers in the wilderness were to be allowed frontage on the river. Jean Baptiste Filhiol, the founder and commander of the Poste d' Ouachita (Monroe), at first, welcomed Maison Rouge and his settlers but was pessimistic about the economic success of the enterprise. Filhiol feared that the Marquis was interested in taking political control of the region. Maison Rouge chose an area north of Poste d' Ouachita already claimed by James Morrison, a former Virginian, after Filhiol investigated, it was found that Morrison had settled in the wrong area, he was entitled to land in Rapides or Natchitoches area.

In June of 1796, Baron de Bastrop was granted twelve leagues square along the Ouachita River and Bayou de Siard, for the production of wheat. The government obligations were to pay the cost of relocation, six months of provisions, freedom of religion (though only the Roman Catholic faith was to be demonstrated publicly), and free land to the settlers. Bastrop agreed to bring 500-1000 settlers to the region and build flour mills for the anticipated wheat crop.

Baron de Bastrop found colonists from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and Louisville, Kentucky and returned to the area in the early spring of 1797 with seventeen families (99 individuals). His original grant was for land that was subject to severe flooding, so he was reassigned a tract one hundred and forty-four plane leagues square along the bayous and the Ouachita River. This land was to constitute what later became nearly all of Morehouse Parish. Bastrop tried to fulfil his part of the contract and purchased land to locate the proposed flour mills. But by the end of the year, Bastrop's project was suspended by the Spanish government and Bastrop began to consider selling his holdings.

In 1798-1799, he sold his Louisiana grant to Abraham Morhouse for $140,000 and two estates Morhouse owned in New York. Morhouse petitioned the government to transfer the Bastrop grant to himself and relocated at the Baron's estate at Bayou de Siard. The transfer was not approved by the Spanish government, but by 1804, Morhouse was deeded two-thirds interest in the grant. Bastrop went to Mexico after losing control of his grant and continued his efforts of colonization in that region until his death in 1827.

Prairie Mer Rouge began to attract settlers in 1806 when Josiah Davenport established the first residence at this location. He was later followed by Morhouse, who returned from Kentucky and later built the first frame house, named Belle Grove, about one mile west of what later became Mer Rouge, a community named after the prairie. Later settlers arriving after 1806 selected home sites near Davenport and Morhouse thus making Mer Rouge the first identifiable settlement in what later became Morehouse Parish. By 1830, Mer Rouge had become the largest community in the interior of the Ouachita region. Churches, schools and business establishments consisting of blacksmith shops, grist mills, general stores, and cotton gins were erected. Eden D. Garrett was appointed postmaster on the 27 July 1837.

The second notable community of the parish was Prairie Jefferson, later renamed Oak Ridge. It was named by its first settlers after their former home in Jefferson County, Mississippi. It went under that name until 1879 when the name was changed to Oak Ridge. Prairie Jefferson offered settlers many advantages. The land was good for agriculture and had not been claimed previously. Steamboats began trading at Point Jefferson and Ion Landing on the Boeuf River during the 1850s and this provided an outlet for cash crops to market in New Orleans.

Other settlements developed on the Bayou Bartholomew in the 1840s were Point Pleasant, Plantersville and Lind Grove (now known as Bonita). Point Pleasant was the major shipping port in western Morehouse Parish and had the area's first sawmill operated by R. Temple and William Lawhead.

Due to the increase in population and economic rivalry between this region and the lower Ouachita Parish of which it was a part, the Louisiana Legislature passed Act 118 in 1844 which split off Morehouse Parish from Ouachita. The original boundary was along the Arkansas state line, Ouachita River, Bayou Bartholomew to the Boeuf River, along the Bayou Lafourche, to Buff River, to the Arkansas line. Part of this was relinquished in 1868 when Richland Parish was created.

The provisions of the act creating Morehouse Parish were such that the Governor was to appoint a parish judge, sheriff, and other officials necessary to administer the new parish. The parish was to be divided into a minimum of five and not more than 12 police jury wards and select a parish seat. John R. Temple, the selected parish judge, called the meeting to order on June 1, 1844. The parish was divided into five police jury wards and a new settlement at the "cross roads" was to serve as the parish seat. This settlement was named Bastrop and evolved as the political and commercial center of the parish in later years.

Many local historians contend the choice of Bastrop was a compromise location for the parish seat by the larger communities of Point Pleasant, Prairie Jefferson, and Mer Rouge. Animosity against the selection site throughout the parish remained strong. Thomas M. Jones, John Boyd, Andrew Cain, and W. R. Lassiter, who signed the document creating the police jury wards, did not sign the document specifying the parish seat.

The population of Bastrop increased for a variety of reasons. It was the parish seat, and with the establishment of Point Pleasant as a shipping location, many investors located themselves near the town. A fire in 1880, briefly halted development. Eleven establishments burned, but most were rebuilt in the following year. By 1900, Bastrop had roughly eight hundred persons followed by Mer Rouge with about five hundred. Collinston, Oak Ridge, and Bonita had approximately three hundred people each. Agricultural dependency continued to dictate rural settlements.

Do You Want to Know More About Morehouse Parish, Louisiana?

Louise White recently donated a copy of the Looking Backward - Memoirs of the Early Settlement of Morehouse Parish by C. C. Davenport to the Sullins Library in Crossett. This is an excellent history of the parish written in 1910 by a grandson of one of the original settlers. These memoirs were first printed as a series in the Mer Rouge Democrat.
